

Couples Counseling

During the process of couples counseling, there may be times when the counselor feels it would be beneficial to the relationship to share information that one of you might tell him or her in an individual session.

With this understanding, I, _____ give my permission for my counselor to share information with myself or my significant other at his/her discretion.

Name

Date

